Fall River, Mass:

Its Location, Water Power, and Growth in Cotton Manufacture.

FALL RIVER, the largest Cotton Manufacturing centre of America, is a city and port of entry of Bristol County, Massachusetts. The city is compactly built, and rises somewhat abruptly from the eastern shore of Mount Hope Bay, an arm of Narragansett Bay.

The remarkable water power and the spacious harbor of Fall River, are such in their conjunction as few cities on all the seaboard enjoy, and have been prime factors in the industrial history of the place. The water power is derived from a small stream—Fall River—whence the name of the city, which has its source, or is in reality the outflow of a chain of ponds lying two miles east of the Bay, covering an area of 3,500 acres, and having a length of about eight miles, and an average breadth of three quarters of a mile. They are mostly supplied by perennial springs, though receiving the outlets of several other sheets of water. The extent of country drained, is comparatively small,—the whole water-shed being not over 20,000 acres, and the quantity of power therefore is to be attributed to the springs alluded to, and to the great and rapid fall of the river, which in less than half a mile is more than 129 feet. The flow of the river is one hundred and twenty-one and a half cubic feet per second, or 9,841,-500,000 Imperial gallons in a year of three hundred days of ten hours each.

The remarkable advantages of this river as a mill stream have been increased by building a dam at the outlet of the ponds, which gives the water an additional fall of two feet, and its lower banks are largely built up with great manufacturing establishments, which, singly or in groups, rapidly succeed each other. The river for nearly its entire length runs upon a granite bed, and for much of the distance is confined between high banks, also of granite. Differing therefore from most other water-powers, this one allows the entire space between its banks to be occupied, and most of the water wheels connected with the older factories are placed directly in the bed of the river. While there is an almost uniform and constant supply of water, it is never subject to excess, and an injury in consequence of a freshet has never yet been known. As the river is thus perfectly controllable, the mills have been built directly across the river, the wheels placed in the bed of the river, and yet from an excess of water, no damage is to be apprehended. In later years, most of the breast wheels employed in these older mills, have been supplanted by the modern appliances of turbine wheels and steam power.

The successful management of these factories on the stream (the oldest organized in 1813), was the foundation of the Cotton Manufacturing industry in Fall River.

In the course of years, with the increase of wealth and skill in manufacture, and the entrance upon the stage of action of younger men, new projects were formed, and since the older mills occupied all available space upon the river banks, new situations were sought out and appropriated. The "New Mills," so-called, (1868-73) were first erected on the margin of the ponds to the south and east of the city, and of which the stream is the outlet, and afterwards in the northerly and southerly sections of the city, on the banks of the Taunton river and Laurel lake.

The number of incorporated companies for the manufacture of cotton goods is now thirty-seven, owning fifty-four mills, with an incorporated capital of $17,478,000, but a probable investment of $35,000,000, containing 1,713,836 spindles, and 40,586 looms.

The census of 1880 reports the total number of mills in the United States as 751, containing 227,156 looms and 10,678,516 spindles, manufacturing 715,000,000 yards of print cloths per annum. Of these, New England has 438 mills, containing 186,374 looms and 8,619,334 spindles, manufacturing 588,000,000 yards of print cloths. Fall River has thus nearly 1-6th of all the spindles in the country, and about 1-5th of those in New England, and manufactures over THREE-FIFTHS of all the print cloths.

The following table will show the number of spindles in the mills of Fall River at the close of each year respectively:

1866,—403,624.	1873,—1,212,694.	1880,—1,390,830.
1867,—470,360.	1874,—1,258,508.	1881,—1,429,412.
1868,—537,416.	1875,—1,269,048.	1882,—1,678,016.
1869,—540,614.	1876,—1,274,265.	1883,—1,713,836.
1870,—544,606.	1877,—1,284,701.
1871,—788,138.	1878,—1,322,169.

Fall River is 49 miles south of Boston, 183 miles north-east of New York, 17 miles south of Taunton, 18 miles south-east of Providence, 14 miles west of New Bedford, and 18 miles north of Newport. Daily lines of steamers connect Fall River, Providence, Newport and New York, while three lines of Railways give ample passenger and freight communications inland.

Fall River was formerly a part of Freetown, and was incorporated as a separate town in 1803. Its name was soon after changed to Troy, but in 1834 its old appellation was restored. Its Indian name was "Quequeteant" signifying the "PLACE of falling water," and that of the river "Quequechan" which signifies "falling water" or "quick running water," hence its appropriate name of Fall River- "Watuppa," the Indian name of the ponds on the east and by which they are still called, signifies "boats" or the "place of boats."

Fall River was incorporated a City in 1854.
